Dear Ms. Klapper,

On behalf of myself and all of the students in the Court and Deposition class at the Reporting Academy of Virginia, I offer a heartfelt thank you.

Having you speak to us in class and offer your knowledge was a rare and valuable opportunity for all of us. Not only did you answer questions that we would have been unable to get answered anywhere else, you were able to provide a very unique outlook on court reporting that was refreshing and positive.

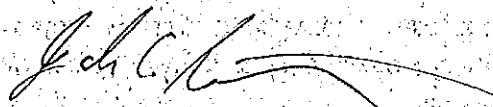

The technical aspects of your talk with us were invaluable. Now we have an idea of what to expect as far as personalities, what to do in a deposition, what to expect from a firm, how to handle our business affairs, and how to get along with other reporters. Also, the emphasis that you placed on the quality of our work impressed on all of us how important it is that our transcripts be of the highest quality.

The combination of your bantering personality and professional appearance also demonstrated to us how the field is not only demanding, but fun and exciting too. The fact that you have so much enthusiasm even today showed us that we can work hard in our chosen field and still be ourselves.

I think that your visit to our class was a very positive experience and certainly has given me even more excitement about the possibilities in the future. With the drudgery of school and trying to pass tests and the demand of the academics, it is easy to lose sight of what we are working for. Your talk with us served to open our eyes to what lies beyond school and alleviated a lot of our fears of the unknown aspects of the court reporting field.

Thank you for your time and visit.

Sincerely,

Joseph Inabnet
